The degree to which campuses report decreasing attendance at activities scheduled during what once were considered prime hours (i.e., early evening), even for high quality events, should not be surprising. Unfortunately, this is often the case, and students’ schedules seemingly skew later every year. Learn about our efforts to build a series of late night/weekend programs, activities, and services, with emphasis on the processes of building a coalition, securing funding, and designing the series, as well as lessons learned.
