To: La Salle University Community
From: Dr. Tom Brennan, Director of Athletics
Date: March 25, 2011
Re: NCAA Certification

The NCAA has announced that it has certified La Salle University as part of the NCAA's ongoing athletics certification process. A designation of certified means that an institution operates its athletics program in substantial conformity with operating principles adopted by the Division I membership. All 335 active Division I members participate in the athletics certification process. The certification process allows us to open our athletic program to the entire university, and we are very proud that La Salle has been certified by the NCAA without recommendations. I'd like to thank the many members of the La Salle campus community who assisted in our self-study.

NEXT FRIDAY, April 1—ANOTHER “Who Am I?”
To: The La Salle Community
From: Dr. Margurete Walsh, Director of Human Resources
Date: March 25, 2011

Each fall, the President honors all full-time employees who have attained five-year service milestones with the University. Those individuals listed below have reached one of the five-year milestones in 2010 and they will be honored at a ceremony on March 25, 2011. Please join me in congratulating them and acknowledging their service to the University in reaching these important milestones.

“I Like It, But Is It Art?”

Beth Nixon, Local Puppeteer

Heather McGee, Ph.D., Director of the Philadelphia Center

Wednesday, March 30, 3:00 p.m.
Holroyd Atrium (Free Food)

Please join us for a highly interactive café that poses the question: what counts as art? From movies to music, television to literature, visual art to dance, we will examine a wide variety of creative works to discern why we are inclined to think of some as “art” and not others. We will also discuss the role that art plays in our own lives and the ways in which it can impact us, both individually and as a society.
The Challenge of Climate Change and Sea Level Prediction: The Role of the Antarctic Ice Sheets

Featuring Sandra Passchier, Ph.D., Department of Earth and Environmental Studies, Montclair State University

Tuesday, March 29, 2011
12:30p.m., Holroyd 190

One of the largest uncertainties in the climate prediction models is the extent of polar ice sheets in a future of a warming planet. The uncertainties are reflected in the large error bars for global surface temperature and sea level predictions. These uncertainties are costly because they could result in significant under- or overspending for construction in urban planning and climate mitigation measures. In her paper, Dr. Passchier examines some of the causes for the large uncertainties in regional surface temperature and sea level predictions and provides a record of some current projects aiming to reduce these uncertainties.

Dr. Passchier completed 5 international drilling expeditions to Antarctica and 1 to Greenland. She has published over 25 peer-reviewed articles in journals such as Nature, Sedimentology, Journal of Geophysical Research, and Palaeogeography/ Palaeoclimatology/Palaeoecology. Dr. Passchier has received over $500k in external funding from NSF and the Joint Oceanographic Institutions. She is a member of the international steering committee for Antarctic Climate Evolution, one of the five flagship research programs of the Scientific Committee of Antarctic Research. She holds a Ph.D. in Geological Sciences from Ohio State University and an M.S. in Physical Geography from the University of Amsterdam.

Sponsored by La Salle’s Geology department and Environmental Studies program, the Science in Society Initiative, and The Explorer Connection (as part of its Sustainable Development Series).

Executive Director of Career and Employment Services

The Executive Director will provide institutional leadership for career and employment initiatives, administrative direction for the Office of Career and Employment Services, and develop successful internal and external partnerships for employment and internship/co-op opportunities. The Executive Director will facilitate the development and implementation of strategic educational programs and services that will assist students in making decisions about life/career planning that are consistent with their personal values and goals. The Executive Director will develop employment strategies that provide support for members of the campus community, as well as employers seeking to hire students or alumni and/or students interested in internships or co-op programs. Finally, the Executive Director will develop systems for assessment and data collection to ensure program goals are being met. This position supervises six staff members, and is a member of the student affairs senior staff leadership team.

A master's degree in higher education, student affairs or a related field (doctorate preferred) and 7 or more years of related experience and success in higher education career development and employment services, or equivalent; or a minimum of 10 or more years of significant experience in corporate human relations, talent recruitment or corporate executive leadership with a bachelor’s degree (master’s preferred). The preferred candidate will also have experience with student life on an urban, residential campus and a commitment to the ongoing enhancement of student learning and student life in such a setting. The successful candidate will be expected to bring to bear skills, abilities, and practices that are consonant with the university’s mission and vision.

For more details on this position or to submit your cover letter, résumé and other required information, please contact:

Lane Neubauer, Ph.D.
